PFA, BANGALORE AT A GLANCE

People for Animals- Bangalore (PFA), is a non-profit conservation organisation working on the rescue and rehabilitation of urban wildlife. People for Animals, Bangalore was formed in 1996, by Namrata Dugar, Alpana Bhartia, Gauri Maini and Arushi Poddar, who were the pioneers.

People for Animals- Bangalore (PFA), works on promoting harmony between humankind and nature. PFA recognizes that like us humans, animals too have the ability to experience pain, and as such they deserve certain basic rights protecting them from pain caused by humans.

In the phase of the massive ecological problems that beset our country such as shrinking habitat, animal sacrifices, cruelty to animals, extinction of wild species of flora and fauna, one can either despair, or act to halt and reverse them. PFA has chosen to act.

We at PFA believe that animals should not be subjected to suffering and exploitation by humans because alternatives exist for nearly every traditional "usage" of animals. The natural habitats and food sources for the native fauna are constantly being eroded and these animals are being exposed to increasing risks from predators and 'unnatural' dangers. Human cruelty accounts for many of the casualties brought in for care, attention and rehabilitation.

The protection of nature and our physical environment from degradation is our primary necessity and responsibility, if we and other life forms on this planet are to survive in the future. PFA is therefore committed to protecting and saving the already degrading and threatened natural heritage of the country. The organization is dedicated to the urgent action of conservation of the urban wildlife in the city of Bangalore.

PFA's principal concerns are crisis management and the provision of quick, efficient aid to those animals that require it the most.

Schools that visited PFA

PfA believes that awareness about animal welfare is most effective when disseminated among children. At PFA, children understand in practicality what wildlife is and why it is essential to co-exist.

Children are introduced to PFA and its work at the 'Knowledge Centre' post which they are divided into groups and escorted around the shelter by the careful guidance of the staff.

The tour around the 6 acre campus usually lasts about 2 to 2 and a half hours where the children get to know the rescue stories of the in-care animals. The interactive session is then followed by a Bird Workshop where a healthy bird resumes its flight back into the skies. The children also participate in an awareness talk about snakes and what to do when you sight a snake.

The learning experience ends with the children taking a pledge to protect and preserve wildlife. They recognize that they need wildlife just as much as it needs them. They make a promise to stand up against any atrocities committed against wildlife
